

Joiners Policy

Title: Joiners Policy

First Derivatives is committed to attracting the highest caliber employees, supporting diversity and to creating an inclusive culture across the company.

To achieve this, we strive to ensure that all new employees are onboarded effectively and provided with all the necessary support, training and assistance to be successful in their career at First Derivatives.

Aim

The policy aims to ensure that the company adopts a joining procedure that is centralized around the candidate which is; fair, consistent, transparent and in-line with jurisdiction legislation for all employees joining the organisation.

Scope

The policy applies to employees, and where applicable, contractors.

Pre-employment Screening

As part of the on-boarding process we will undertake background checks as permitted in the jurisdiction of your proposed employment, in line with the company and client requirements. We will also require a number of documents to be completed/provided and this is applicable to and required for all employees.

Induction

In order to ensure that your career with the company gets off to the best possible start with us and we are committed to providing a formal induction for every new employee.

We recognize the importance of a quality induction that provides the critical knowledge and information that quickly fit in and contribute effectively within the company.

Probation Period

Provides a defined timeframe for us to assess objectively whether an employee is suitable for the job, taking into account their capability, skills performance, attendance and general conduct.

At the end of your probation period, you will receive written notification from one of:

- Successful completion
- Extension to provide opportunity to demonstrate required level of performance
- Termination of contract where the required level of performance has NOT been demonstrated
